One day in April, there were a thousand dinosaur eggs out in the forest.

The dinosaur eggs hatched one at a time. An Ankylosaurus without a club came out at last.

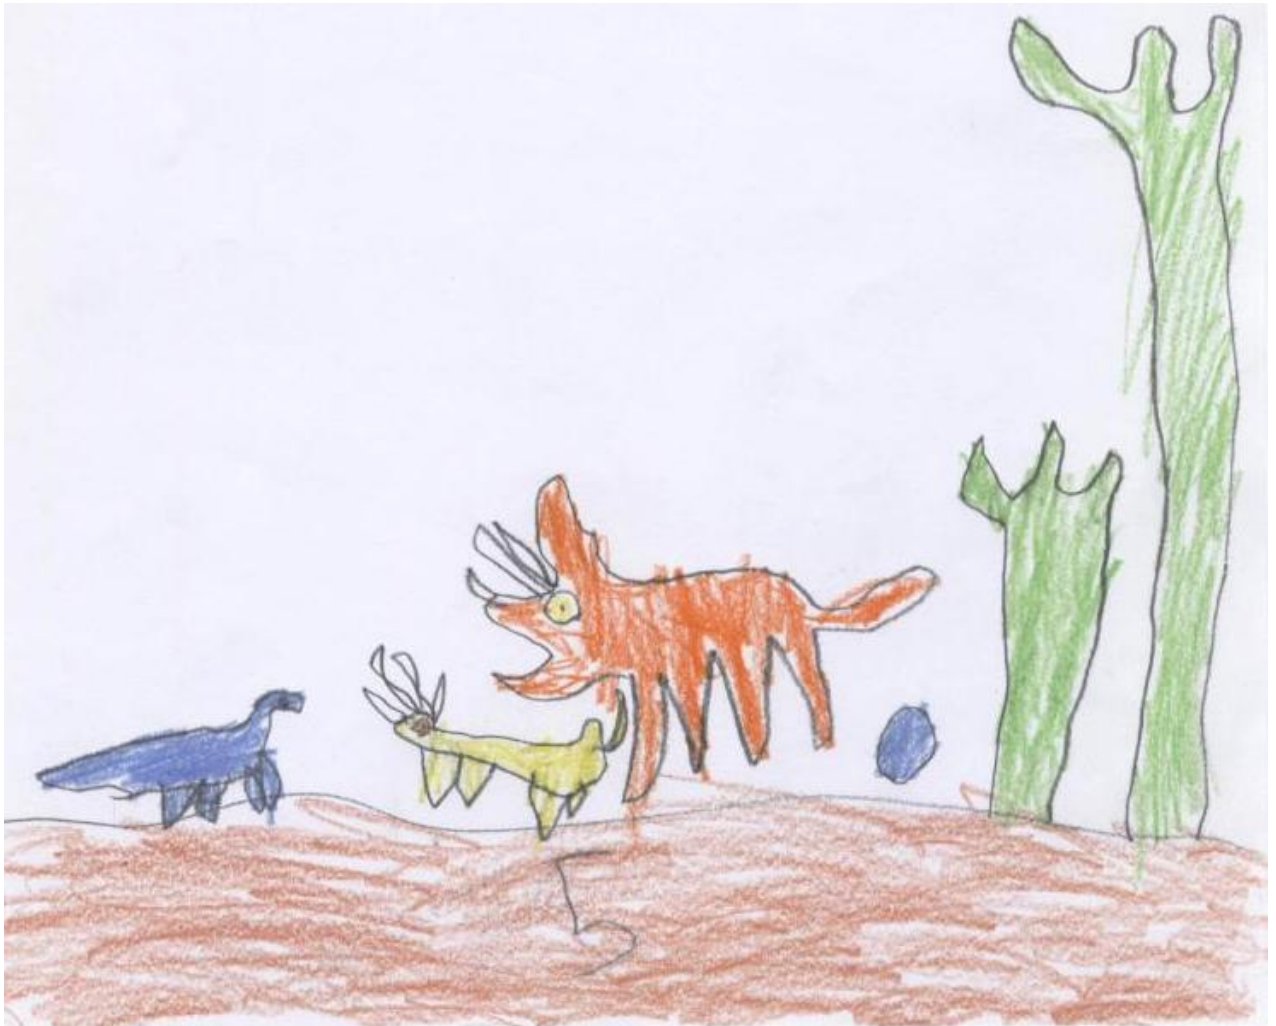

He tried to catch up with the other Ankylosauruses but he got lost. He left the woods and went into the desert.

He wandered out into the open and saw all kinds of animals he had never seen before. The first one he saw was a long neck.

The next one he saw was a triceratops. The triceratops said, "I don't think that you're one of my kind."

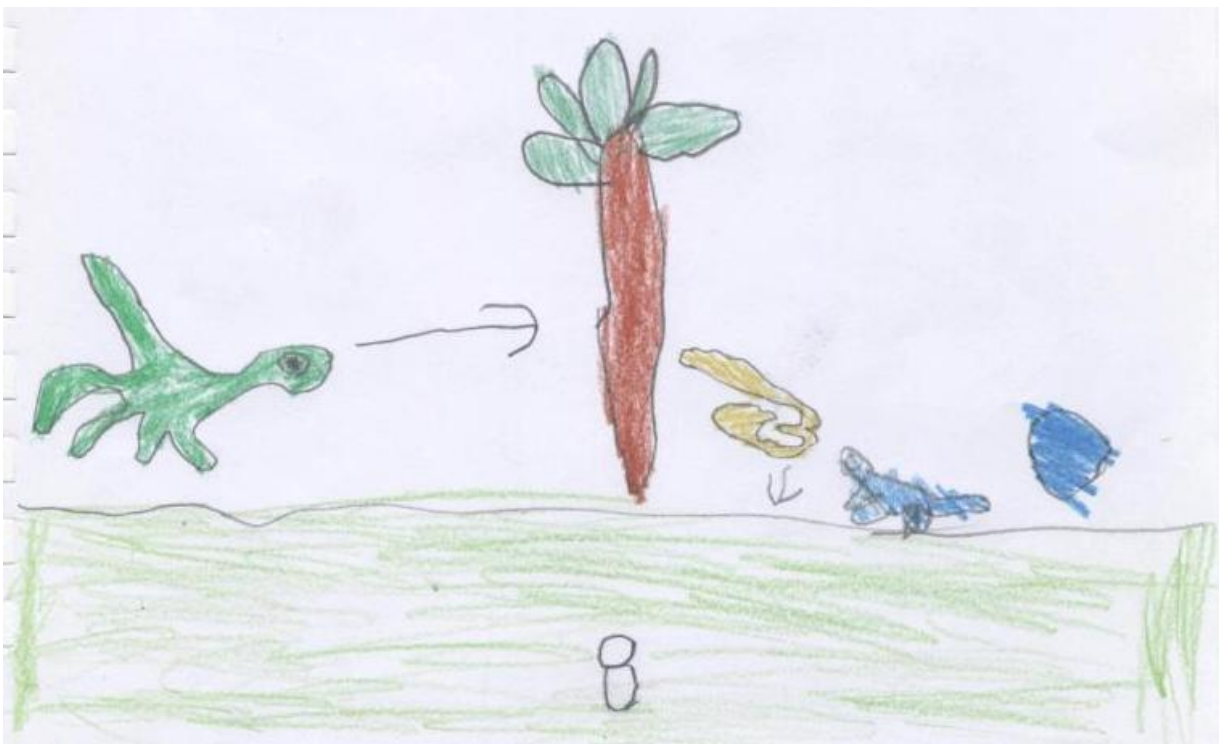

Baby Ankylosaurus saw a baby pterodactyl. He asked him, "Can you fly up in the sky like me?"
Baby Ankylosaurus said, "No I can't because I am four legged."

Then he met up with a Baby Duckbill dinosaur. The Duckbill said, “Can you hold your breath underwater?” Baby Ankylosaurus said, “I don’t have a beak like yours.”

Next, he met up with a Baby Pachyocephalus who asked him, “Can you head-butt like me?” Baby Ankylosaurus said, “No, my head’s not hard like yours.

Finally he met up with a grown up Ankylosaurus with a club. He said, “Why don’t you have a club? That make you defenseless.”

He picked him up, found the right kind that matches him and took him back to the nest. Mom said, “Where have you been?” “Little brother, don’t do that again!” said his brothers.

Baby Ankylosaurus said, “I don’t know which way you guys went.” He was very happy to be home. He got a gift, his first spikey club.
