

Case of the Cats: The Missing Prize

By Hunter

There once was an owner that had a smart cat. The cat was so smart that it can solve mysteries. The cat's name was Midnight.

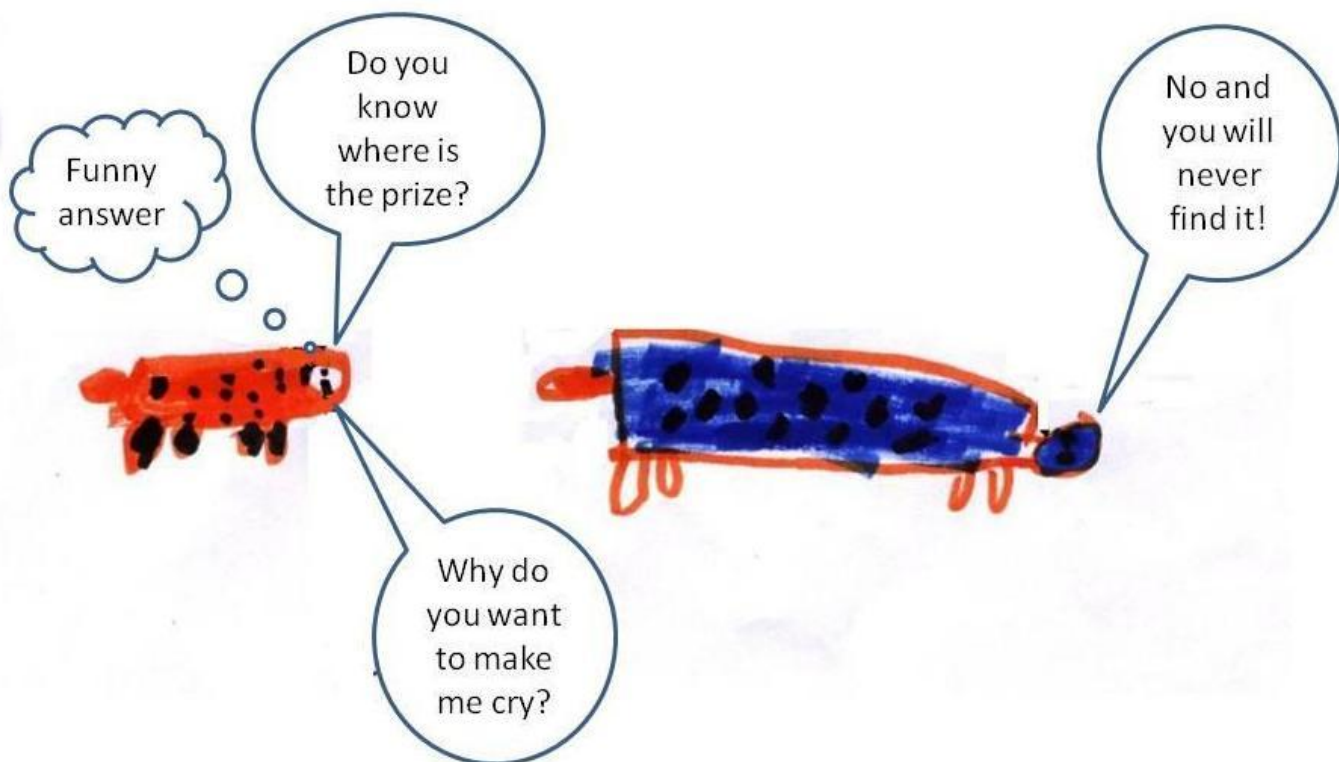

He entered an egg finding contest. The cat who finds the most eggs wins. Midnight found 50 eggs and the other cat found 40 eggs. Midnight won!

Midnight went to get his prize.
But the prize was missing. The prize was a wind up toy mouse.
The judges forgot where they put it.

Midnight asked a wiener dog if he knew where the prize was. He said, "no and you will never find it." Midnight thought that was a funny answer. Midnight followed the dog. So he was very quiet and sneaky.

The dog went to the hallway and looked in an air vent. The dog smiled and walked off. Midnight checked the air vent and he found the wind up toy mouse. Midnight went back to his owner and told about the dog.

They asked the dog why did you hide the prize from the judges. The dog said I can't compete in the egg contest because I'm a dog. Midnight asked the judges if dogs can join next year. Yes you can join next year said the judges.

The owner, dog, and Midnight went to the air vent and got the prize. They became friends and they both found the same number of eggs next year.
