Greeny

One day a baby caterpillar was born. Once the other caterpillars saw it, they really didn't like its color. It was all green. But all the other baby caterpillars have many colors on them. They didn't understand. Six weeks later he still hadn't grown out of the color green. Well he was occasionally getting more greener.

On his way to school, his friend yelled, "Hey Greeny, come on the shortcut with us." Greeny said, "Ok." But there was something special about Greeny. He could change different colors of green. He blended in with the grass. He was changing dark green and even blended in with the dead spots on the grass.

They kept wondering where he was. He was still following them. But, they couldn't see him. So they didn't worry about it. Once they got to school Greeny blended in with the desk. When it was time to go home the same thing happened.

The other caterpillars started to get in their cocoons. Greeny was the last one in his cocoon. Greeny was also the last one out of his cocoon. He was the most beautiful butterfly ever seen. The rest of them were now just like he was when he was a caterpillar. They were all green. But Greeny was now so colorful and he could still change color. He could change from purple to pink to orange to blue. Never judge people by their color.
