By Tristin

Once upon a time there was a boy named Tristin. He did not go outside at all. All he did was play video games.

One day he went to the game store and bought a new game. The new game was about castles, dragons, and knights.

     He played his new game all the time. One day Tristin is chasing the dragon out of the kingdom, and all of a sudden Tristin looks up from his controller and he was in the game! He was dressed as a knight.

He stood in a meadow. A sorcerer appears and tells Tristin he must win the game to get home. There was a fire breathing dragon right in front of him. But as soon as the dragon saw the sorcerer, he flew away.

Tristin said to the sorcerer, "Wait!" The sorcerer stopped and said, "You have to defeat the dragon, save the princess, and bring her back to the castle. Then you can go back home." Tristin said, "So, I'll go save the princess. Where is the princess?"

The sorcerer said, "She is in the castle on King Street."

"Well goodbye," said Tristin. "Goodbye," said the sorcerer.

Then Tristin took off on his horse. After two days the knight said, "Well this is it." He looked up at the very top of the castle, and he saw the princess. He swam across the moat.

He went into the abandoned castle. There was a chess board in a corner of the castle. He went up the stairs and he opened the door to the princesses room.

"Oh, you scared me," said the princess. "Sorry, why are you not escaping?"

"Because he will do something to my father!" said the princess. "Where is he?" asked the knight.

"In my closet," the princess said. "Oh, we'll get him and let's go," said the knight. "Ok," said the princess.

"Who's the guy keeping you captive?" asked knight.

"He is not a guy, he is a dragon," she said. "Well, we should be quiet then," he said.

They were all downstairs and they saw the dragon. Then the dragon said, "the knight will have a war with me!" The knight asked, "What kind of war?"

"A war of checkers!" the dragon roared. "Ok!" said the knight. Then they started. It was not long before the knight won. The knight yelled, "Checkmate!"

The dragon said, "I give up!". The knight defeated the dragon, saved the princess, and took princess and her father back to her castle.

When they got back to the castle, the sorcerer opened the door and said, "Come in." "Ok," said the knight. The sorcerer said, "Now you can get to go home." The knight said, "Thank you sir!"

Tristin opened his eyes and he was back home. He lived happily ever after playing video games and not being inside them.
