Brooke and Pegasus

Once upon a time in Paris there lived a princess named Brooke who could talk to animals. Now there also lived a magic Pegasus. On a beautiful sunny day, the princess was in her room getting ready for the ball. When out of the blue, here came a beautiful white and sparkly flying horse.

The magic horse landed on the princess's balcony. The Pegasus neighed, "Are you the princess that can talk to animals?"

Brooke answered, "Yes"

"Well my name is Pegasus and I have a mystery," exclaimed the magic horse. "Well, here I go....So when I was a young girl, I always used to play with my friends, and one day my friends disappeared. A powerful sorceress cast a spell on me and only a magic fruit tree will turn me back into a human. I flew to you because I could never find the magic fruit tree. I thought that you could help me find the magic fruit tree because you can talk to animals and you are a princess."

The princess said, "Well my name is Brooke and I have a mystery too."

"What's that?" asked Pegasus.

"Well when I was born, there was a light all around me, then it just became black and creepy darkness when a troll kidnapped me when I was a baby. The troll never let me get out of a tower. So when I was old enough, I ran away and snuck into this castle. A servant found me and brought me to the king. Instead of being mean, the king adopted me."

Well, they started to become friends and playing their favorite games together when the bell started ringing.

“Oh that means the ball is starting and I have to go,” said the alarmed princess. The princess said good bye.

The Pegasus went home. The princess went to the ball and danced with lots of people. During the night, both the princess and Pegasus and couldn't sleep or stop thinking about each other. In the morning, Pegasus ate and flew back over to the princess's castle. Brooke had a good day riding Pegasus and Pegasus had a good day with Brooke. An old woman happened to see them flying over her.

Brooke asked, “Why do you want to become human again. Don't you want to stay a magic flying horse?”

Pegasus said, “You are a nice friend and I want to become human again and live with you. Also since I am white and sparkly, a lot of people have tried to capture me or kill me for my sparkly coat. I've had to escape a couple of times.”

It became late at night and they both said goodbye.

That night the old woman snuck into the castle and pretended to be a servant. The old woman put a pack of mints on her food tray. Brooke ate them and couldn't speak anymore. Suddenly her eyes shut and she fell asleep. The next time she woke up, she found herself in a high tower far from the castle.

Pegasus flew back over the castle and looked everywhere for the princess. Pegasus couldn't find her anywhere. Pegasus all of sudden smelled something familiar. It was the sorcerous who turned her into the flying horse. She followed the smell to where she used to be trapped by the sorcerous.

When Pegasus got to the high tower, she landed and went into the room where the princess was. The princess still couldn't talk, so she tried to push the Pegasus out of the room. Pegasus felt confused.

The old woman jumped out of the hiding spot, and put a freeze spell on Pegasus. The sorcerous cackled, "I've finally got you now! I followed you all over trying to catch you again. You'll never be able to escape me again."

When the sorcerous was locking Pegasus up, the princess snuck into the spell room and grabbed one of the potions. It had a picture of a rabbit on it. She went to the kitchen and poured some of the potion into old woman's drinking cup. She snuck out of the room.

The old woman walked in and took a drink. She lied down on the floor in pain and turned into a black rabbit. The princess took the keys from the sorceress's old dress and unlocked Pegasus. They locked up the rabbit so she couldn't turn back. They looked in the old lady's spell books and found a spell to make it so she couldn't escape.

They found another book and found a potion to get her voice back and a potion for Pegasus to become a girl again. The problem was they had to get all the ingredients which were far away. This began the adventures of Brooke and Pegasus.
