

Cat's Breakfast

By Paige

One day, cat woke up ready for breakfast. It was a really hot day in Africa. In the morning she licked her tabby striped fur. She wanted eggs. But, she didn't have any.

So she decided to go see Penguin. Cat walked a long ways to see Penguin. When she got to the beach, Penguin was playing in the water.

“Hey Penguin, I have a question for you,” yelled cat.

Penguin came out of the ocean and waddled onto the beach. “Hey cat, what do you want?”

Cat asked, “Do you have any eggs for breakfast?”

“Of course not, my babies are in those,” said Penguin. “Why would you even asked that?”

Penguin shook her head with a look of disgust on her face. She went back into the ocean.

So Cat decided to go to Zebra. Cat went from the beach to the grasslands.

Cat asked, "Do you have an egg I can have for breakfast?"

Zebra said, "What kind of egg? An ostrich egg? An eagle egg? A lizard egg? A turtle egg?"

Cat said, "I would take any egg at this point. Do you have an egg?"

"No," said Zebra.

"Alrighty then," said Cat as she walked away. Her stomach growled. Zebra wasn't a big help.

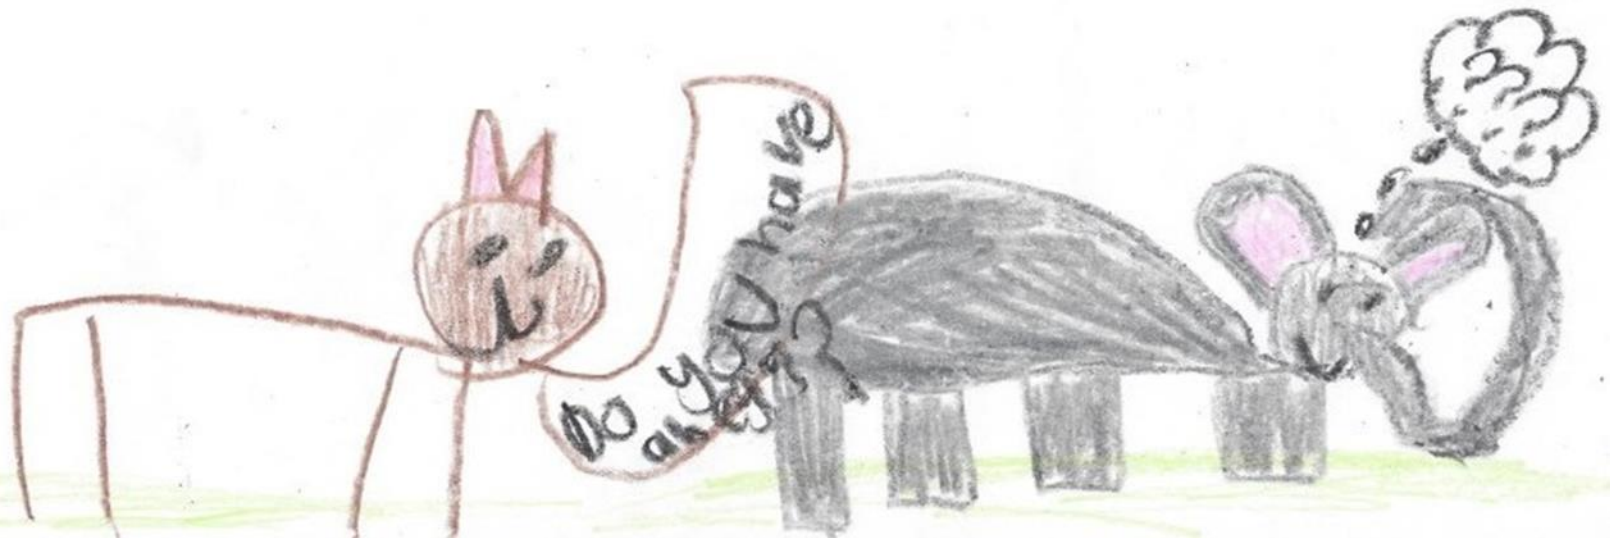

So cat decided to go to elephant's home.

“Hey elephant, do you have any eggs?” asked Cat.

Elephant scratched his head with his trunk in wonder and asked, “What’s an egg?”

“Nevermind, I am too hungry to explain,” said Cat. She thought elephant wasn’t a big help either.

So Cat decided to go see Tiger.
Cat traveled from the grasslands to the jungle. Cat's stomach grumbled loudly.

Cat asked, "Hey tiger, do you have any eggs?"

Tiger said, "Sure, but you have to invite me over If you want them."

Cat said, "Thank you. Where are they?"

"Oh they are still in the chicken coop. You are going to have to help me get them because I am too big," said Tiger.

Tiger led Cat to the edge of the village with the chicken coop. Cat and Tiger waited until night. Cat tiptoed to the coop and snuck in a crack. He grabbed ten eggs before the chickens woke up. The chickens ran around wild and clucked lots of noise. Cat ran as fast as he could out of the coop to the edge of the jungle. She gave some eggs to Tiger and then ran home. Cat invited all of her friends. They had a wonderful egg breakfast for dinner.

